Dear Readers,
As we present this year's edition of Apprise 2025, we take a moment to reflect on the remarkable journey of Modern College—a journey shaped by change and the enduring spirit of evolution that defines who we are. On these pages, the achievements and endeavours whether big or small still reflect the core essence of the institution.

We are privileged to build upon a strong foundation laid by those who came before us, carrying forward a legacy of excellence and an unwavering commitment to the ideals of True Education.

This magazine is more than just a compilation of articles—it is a reflection of the vibrant spirit of our college community. It showcases the dedication, creativity, and passion of our faculty, staff, and students, who continually strive for excellence and foster both intellectual and personal growth. It serves as a testament of how through every trial and tribulation, we did not go over it but faced it head on, went under it and still emerged victorious.

As we move forward, may we continue to learn from our past while embracing the transformative possibilities ahead. Let us be the architects of a future where our heritage fuels innovation, and our shared curiosity and collaboration drive us toward new heights.

We invite you to explore the pages of Apprise 2025 and discover the stories, achievements, and insights that make our college truly dynamic and inspiring.

With pride and enthusiasm,
The Editorial Team

from the~ CHAIRPERSON

Kudos to the Editorial Team for their consistency and perseverance in bringing out another edition of our Annual Magazine Apprise 2025. I appreciate the effort and hard work that goes into reaching out to people, collecting all the articles, photos, going through the year's events and then finally, putting it all together.

It has been two years since the formal inauguration of our college campus at Piphema and yet, it feels just like yesterday. What then seemed like a long project to open the college campus now feels like a momentary blur. Time flies fast!

Over time, we have been adding to our college facilities and trying to develop the campus into an oasis, away from the hustle and bustle of town and city life. The endeavour is to provide a tranquil environment for our students to concentrate on their studies while giving them the freedom of space and nature to enjoy various extra-curricular activities. We have a larger and better campus, but it brings its own challenges in ensuring that everything runs smoothly. So, I want to acknowledge the contributions of everyone: the students, the clubs, the faculty, the office staff and the operations staff. All of us collectively make Modern College what it is today.

I look forward to all the contributions in Apprise – articles, thoughts, reminiscences, photos and reading about the achievements and highlights of our students, the departments and the clubs.

Let me end by wishing each one of you at Modern College a wonderful year ahead!

Mrs. A. Kaisa

Message

from the~ MANAGING DIRECTOR

Greetings!

This Academic session has been a milestone as we complete the first phase of the Campus road. From the dusty, slushy to concrete paved road – the campus ride has become a smooth ride and we are indeed grateful to HiKOKI Power Tools India Pvt Ltd for helping Modern College in providing an all weather road.

Our next big target is to complete the Football ground project, which has been going on since February 2022 and our Operations Team are toiling hard to make this happen. A significant part is completed and games do happen but our Operations team are ambitiously working for a FIFA standard size ground, which we should have soon. We want to thank our Alumni Association (MCAA) for the much-needed Fund Raise to give a boost in the football ground construction project.

This session, we witnessed more Students/Youth Exchange program besides the National Integration Tour outside the state – these kind of tours and exchange programs help our students to get a first-hand experience and exposure to different cultures, people and food habits.

The Open Mic in the Academic Lawn is something we look forward to on Wednesdays and the traditional Fridays provide an opportunity to stay grounded to our roots.

The monthly Positive Links, the Alumni engagement talks and the Newspaper articles are such a pleasure to read, listen at and I look forward to another year of Apprise Publication.

All the best. Best regards,

Mr. Pelee Hekha

from the~ EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Greetings Everyone! As I begin my message for our Annual Magazine, I am thrilled to be taken back to the time where we began our academic session 2024-25 last July. The session had been an eventful one marked by so many interesting and exciting events. Despite the glitches and challenges (due to external events beyond our control), we could say, we faced them, braved the bad weather and came out resilient. And for this we all deserve to give ourselves a pat on each others' back and a round of applause for the efforts and successes.

As said, the academic session had been an exciting one for everyone at Modern College –students, teachers and staff alike. Alongside academic activities; we had begun the session with the 2nd Modern Workshop, launched Desi Corner, made 2nd Autumn Fiesta bigger and better. We were ready to embrace change and take on new events such as conducting e-games and the Open Mic, both of them purely driven by the students. Beginning this year, we had a fun filled Modern Week and some of our students touring outside Nagaland through excursions in February and March. We also successfully conducted the Annual State Level Students' Seminar which brings young scholars together (and have become one of our identities). In addition to that we got to witness activities from various clubs – monthly editions from the creative team of Positive Link, the energetic NCC, NSS, and the EU, Gender Champion Club, the various sports clubs. And finally the warm and loving parting social given out to the final years from the juniors brings us to "All's Well that Ends Well!"

It is through your relentless efforts and teamwork that we have been able to carry out many interesting events and achieve significant milestones this year. I hope our students continue to take up more responsibilities, leadership roles and continue to learn (and also unlearn) build confidence and grow as they spend their time here at Modern College. If I am asked to sum up the experiences of Academic Year 2024-25 in one word, it would be apt to say "EXHILARATING!" Let us continue to emanate positive energy, camaraderie and teamwork in whatever we do and take this institution forward!

Finally, big Congratulations to the Editorial Team in planning out so meticulously, executing neatly and coming out with a wonderful edition of Apprise 2025. It is testament to the hard work, sincerity and dedication of those at Modern College.

Message

from the~ PRINCIPAL

The achievements and activities in this Academic Session has yet again reminded us about our college motto – “True Education”. The college has been working not only with practical goals but also with values and character. Continuously for the past years, the college has been producing University Toppers in different subjects, likewise this academic session also, the Department of Education, Sociology and Vocation has produced five University Toppers.

Apart from classroom teachings and learning, students have been actively involved in different clubs, sports, committees, union, etc. for co-curricular activities which have enhanced them to build and learn values. The Exposure Trips have been frequent this academic session where students have visited other parts of the country such as Goa, Mumbai, Pune, Arunachal Pradesh, Gaya, Sikkim, etc. In the field of sports, our students have also represented the University and participated in the All India Inter-University Sports which have enriched their sportsmanship and confidence. Weekly sports coaching of different Sports club, Open Mic and Special camps for NSS, EU, NCC, etc. has been a remarkable development not only for the club members and unions but also for all Modernians. I am also delighted and grateful for the participation of the Alumni contributions and donations towards the Football Ground project.

As we wrap up the academic session and get ready for another year of hope, I pray that we will all continue to learn and embrace with positive attitude for an all round development. I thank the Literary and Cultural Committee for working relentlessly for the Apprise 2025. I hope Apprise 2025 will re-ignite us with all the good opportunities that we have experienced and received, and keep on counting our blessings to look beyond for more. I wish everyone the best and Happy Reading.

He along with other members from the organisation and well-wishers from the area also planted trees to commemorate the occasion.

The programme commenced with Ms. Mhabeni Tsopoe of B.A. 6th semester leading the unveiling segment. Mr. K. Robvii, Pastor of Mao Baptist Church Kohima (MBCK), invoked God's blessing for the occasion.

Later, a felicitation programme was organised for the guests where Ms. Grace Gonmei of B.A. 2nd semester chaired the session. The welcome note was delivered by Dr. Vitsou Yano, Principal of Modern College, followed by a special song by Ms. Shenyu from B.A. 6th semester and Modern College Students' Union.

Mr. Pelee Hekha, Managing Director of Modern College, presented a report on the road construction which was supported by HiKOKI Power Tools India Private Limited through its Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) initiative. Student representative, Ms. Ketouseno Vielie from B.A. 4th semester shared her personal experience and expressed gratitude to HiKOKI.

Mr. Santhosh Kumar Tumkur Vijaykumar then delivered a short speech where he impressed the gathering on the service HiKOKI has rendered for the improvement of society in the past few years in the country. After experiencing the programme and learning the detailed report of the road construction he expressed his happiness at being a part of it and said 'seeing is believing'. He also mentioned that it is the company's desire to expand its humanitarian service beyond a certain geographical area so as to reach even in far flung and remote areas such as in Nagaland. He opined that the success of the company cannot be measured by the profit it generates alone but by its service to humanity. Further, he also expressed hope for positive impact even in the future.

Daughter of Her Pain

I saw granny quickening her feet
Seeing trucks in fleet.
"Army trucks" she said,
"Army trucks" she feared.
"They'll harm us, oh dear!"
Granny cried out of tear.
"They shoot" she cried.
"They kill" she warned.
Her reaction made me sad, They were oppressed too bad.
It took me back to the stories she told
Of the conflicts, now cold.
The fight against Indian armies
Which tore apart families;
It let to violent uproar, Became the 'undeclared war'
"They were captured" Granny sighed,
"They were tortured" Granny grieved.
Women were raped at gun point,
The uncanny crimes against the innocent.
Granny was a child then
But she's still scared of them.
The sound and sight of armies Make her curse and despise.
The echoes of their agony
I shall spread it to many, I shall love my alma mater,
The blood spilled shall matter.

Echoes of our Past

THIRD POSITION

Past and present, an opposite spectrum?
Interwoven and orchestrated by Him;
Patterns shift, yey still entwined.

Lore and ethos from bygone era,
Still chaperone me and you;
To lead us to greater heights.

So, checkered past? Lest we forget,
For it edifies the present stance;
Under its wings of timeless wisdom.

We often say
"Past is past, gone is gone
Yesterday will never come back."
A tragic truth we all believe in,
'tis so true we cannot change.

We often say
"Past is past, gone is gone
Let it go, just move on."
An incident you need to accept,
'tis so true we cannot change.

We often speak much about the past
That we should let it go,
Knowing not it still lingers in our hearts.
That we should move forward, abandon the past,
Knowing not it still echoes in our minds.

We often forget who we are,
What we are, how we are...
If we do, it'll haunt us less,
For it is the echoes of our past
That sustain our very breadth.

It is our past that shapes who we are today.
It is our past's decisions that explain why we are here today.
It is our past battles that make us brave today.
It is our past traumas that make us kinder today.
It is the echoes of our past that voice every one of us.

The NIGHT SUN RISE

FIRST POSITION

Mr. Ricky Das
B.A. 6th Semester
Dept. of Political Science

In the vast sea, she could clearly see the beautiful sunset in a way like no one ever did. The vast horizon depicted as though the sun was being devoured by the unending sea. However, as she stood at the edge of the window, its panel seemed to have been rusting due to the heavy breeze from the west wind. She stood there with her eyes filled with tears, which perfectly reflected the golden rays of the setting sun. She stood there questioning herself if at all she was ready to do it.

As she stood at the edge questioning herself, the breeze became heavier as compared to the other days; all of a sudden, she heard the family album fall on the ground, which created a loud noise and diverted her attention for now. She closed the window and picked up the family album, which was yellowish in colour, and the photos were fading out of its print, while the last one completely had no prints on them; it appeared to her that someone might have intentionally tried to erase some faces from some of them. She cleaned the album, freeing it from its age-old dust and webs, placed herself by the chair which belonged to her grandfather, and never shifted its position. As she flipped through the first photo which was fading due to the moisture, she found out that it was a photo of her grandparents when they first moved to the city; the background of the photo had hills and green forest, and she looked out of the window to find that the sea expanded so much that it had devoured the hills and the green forest became a long unending highway and tall building. As she kept flipping through the album, she found some faded photos of her great-grandparents as well who migrated from their native village to make the tables turn. One photo showed her mom holding her and cooking dishes for a festival, while in another, her dad teaching her how to ride a bicycle and a lot more. Her teary eyes filled with joy, she started smiling at the sunset, recollecting all her childhood memories and how she grew up from being an innocent child to a busy city girl. She questioned her existence and asked herself what made her come so far. As she sat holding the album, she seemed to have noticed that the chair that she sat on was handmade by her grandfather. She recollected all the memories she had while growing up and how her founding pillars made it happen for themselves in this harsh city. Yes, the city was being harsh to her; it kept pushing her every day, with never-ending work Emails and no weekends. Therefore, she called the city harsh.

Gazing at the birds outside, she recalled how vigilant and determined her grandparents were. They stood against all odds, kept working hard, and never did they allow these troubles to deny them their triumphs. All of a sudden, recollecting their memories, she remembered how she went through the day against all odds, completed her work on time and went on for the next quest. She laughed at herself because she now remembered her grandmother telling her, "My child, all you have to do is work and work", and to date, she unintentionally was doing the same. It reminded her how her grandfather would work at the clock tower for the entire day, come back in the evening and go to the station to sell newspapers to make ends meet. This thought motivated her to promise herself to do a little bit more for herself. All of a sudden she was no longer tired and was not complaining about all the pending work that she had to do tomorrow.

She barely remembered anything about her parents, because both of them passed away due to a bus accident while returning from work. Therefore, all she knew about them was in a script which her grandparents narrated to her every evening. She recalled how her grandmother would tell her about her father, who relentlessly worked day and night to make a saving, and her mother worked at a hotel nearby, where now stood a shopping mall. She was recollecting all the difficult times that her founding pillars had to go through; she found out that she had the determination of her grandfather, the courage of her grandmother and the never giving up attitude of her dead parents. All this brought her to think that it was through those stories and hardships around which she grew up with, that fuelled her to go on every day.

All of a sudden she gave a bright smile to the buzzing city outside her window, challenging it to bring it on, the girl that stood at the edge to end everything that day, now stood to change everything to go her way. Soon the large city clock rang and it was 6:00pm already, she made herself a cup of coffee, cleaned her room, wrote an everyday note to herself reminding her to visit all her childhood places again to relive all her memories.

In the end, we get to know that a girl who was ready to finish everything for herself came back stronger and more courageous than ever before, thanking the stories and hardships that shaped her present and motivated her for the future. That particular evening, she experienced a new sunrise within herself...

MORAL:

Living through our past echoes makes us stronger, only when we accept them.

The SOUVENIR

SECOND POSITION

Ms. Rothrongru Sangtam
B.A. 6th Semester
Department of English

Rummaging through the dusty store room in the attic, I found a peculiar set of necklaces neatly wrapped in a piece of white cloth, and it instantly caught my attention; little did I know this small finding would take me off on a whole new journey.

Being born and raised in mainland India, i.e., Maharashtra, I had little to no knowledge about the unique piece of jewellery I discovered, and the question of how it ended up in my attic had me scratching my head. The necklace was made up of ivory, glass beads and carnelians, all connected with a cloth string and showed no signs of damage. Both my parents were away for a business trip then, and so I didn't want to trouble them with a silly call, so I took it up upon myself to find out about the necklace and its connection with my family. I took a picture of it and searched it on Google and the results shocked me; the necklace was from Nagaland, and it was not just a necklace but a tribal necklace exclusive to the Naga people. Although, I have found out the origin of the necklace, I just couldn't seem to connect the dots because neither my parents nor my grandparents were of Naga origin.

After two days, my parents returned, and "Good God" knows how much that got me excited, not that I missed them, but I had a hell of a lot of questions!! I took my time and let them finish unpacking, and served them tea in the most polite manner; and now it was time for the question round. I seated them in the living room and showed them the necklace, to which my father replied that it belonged to my great-grandfather. My father narrated that he was a soldier during his time, and he had been posted in Nagaland during the 1940s, and on his return, he brought along the necklace as a souvenir.

That night, I took deeper research into that necklace because there wasn't anything I was doing useful after graduation anyway. I learnt that these necklaces and jewellery, in general, were worn as a display of wealth and status; there were different types of necklaces and jewellery that were exclusive to each Naga tribe. The necklaces were made of stones, glasses, teeth, bones, ivory, etc. Job tears were also used in the necklaces as it is also used for its medicinal properties among its people. Stones such as Jasper and carnelians were used as well because it was a belief among the people that it has healing properties. Such stones were usually imported from mainland India. Wooden beads were also carved into intriguing designs. The necklaces with all the combined objects made up stunning unique pieces.

Now, this information alone didn't suffice me, and I had to get down to business. After a little research, I decided to take a trip to Nagaland. On reaching Nagaland, I was awestruck at the natural beauty therein; even the air around me seemed purer and cooler. While Maharashtra's sun dried up my body fluids, Nagaland's sun seemed to radiate warmth and energy. My purpose in Nagaland now was to dive deeper into their culture and traditions, and my focus was fixated on their jewellery. Nagaland is known for its colourful display of festivals and array of jewellery. I had decided to travel to Mon district to advance my research as the description of its people intrigued me. They were called the 'warriors' among the tribals. It was there that I found out that the ornaments and jewellery actually had different stories to tell. Among the Konyaks, I learnt that the jewellery showcases their bravery. Their necklaces were a combination of metal, boar tusks, ivory and cowries; a sight of which pulls strings of curiosity to tourists like me. These necklaces symbolised the status of its owner in the society. In the past, boar tusks and ivory were added to every head the person conquered. Along my journey, I also had the privilege to witness the making of traditional necklaces. Women lined up in an open area; cotton strings were rolled and twisted and were adorned with wooden beads, cowries, carnelians and claws of animals, with every piece holding a significance of its very own and were worn with traditional clothing, adding to its authenticity.

Researching and staying with the Naga people filled my bosom with satisfaction, it seemed to have scratched an itch on my back. The peculiar piece of necklace inside my dusty attic opened a whole new destination for me, and somehow, I am here sitting on my porch sipping bitter black tea, which has now become an appetizer for me. It's my third year staying in Nagaland and home has never felt warmer. I am now dedicated to learning more about the people and their culture, a culture that needs the speculation of the world, a culture with its unique story.

The UNSPOKEN ECHOES

THIRD POSITION
Ms. Mahima Rai
B.A. 4th Semester
Department of Political Science

The air crackled with a familiar mixture of excitement and nostalgia as Mimi entered the grand old campus of her higher secondary but this time not as a student but as an alumni.

Ten years had passed since she had last entered the campus. As she entered the school gate, memories came flooding back – the laughter echoing in the classroom, the nervous anticipation of exams, the thrill of first crushes. The school gate had opened the portal of the past. The hall, corridors where the students run around, the basketball court where the students sit during breaks in groups and gossip, the benches under the tree that hold thousands of secrets and at the right corner of the school building, there's Auntie Chamela's canteen where there's always a huge rush of students especially during the break, everything still remained the same. As Mimi was wandering through the building, she entered a classroom that was located at the right corner of the ground floor, which was named R-2; as she entered the room, the memories of her higher secondary days flashed before her eyes. She remembered the first day of her higher secondary, and imagined herself sitting on the second bench of the first row, shy, introverted and scared; she felt nostalgic at the journey of becoming a bold, confident and outstanding student. As Mimi was thinking about her higher secondary days, she suddenly remembered about Miss Gloria, her class teacher, who played a very significant role in Mimi's higher secondary life. She was the mentor of Mimi and she always inspired, motivated and guided her. As Mimi was thinking, recalling the memories, she saw something at the left corner of the wall; it was her name, along with her best friends– Alice, Lucy, Rose and Vienie. She remembered the forehead fight, those silly gossips and those serious talks about the future, and recalled how they used to be inseparable but now hardly even meet.

The classroom that was once filled with the laughter of the batch of 2014 is now completely silent. The school isn't as noisy as it used to be back then, as the batch of 2014 which was considered to be a fish market had already graduated. Now, the ground floor is not that noisy as the new batch is full of introverted students. As the clock struck 2 pm, the bell rang and Mimi remembered how the batch of 2014 sang songs together for the last time and made promises to be in touch. Mimi walked through the corridor feeling a profound sense of gratitude towards DBHS as it was not just a place of learning, it had been a place for forging friendship, nurturing dreams and shaping the person that she is today. As she was leaving the campus, Mimi carried a treasure trove of memories with her; the visit was poignant as she remembered the enduring power of education and the impact and importance of teachers and mentors in one's life. Room R-2 is now occupied by a new batch, and they are creating memories and histories of their own. This legacy will continue, and the walls and the desks and benches of R-2 holds the stories and secrets of many batches which remain unspoken.
